WORKSHOPS & SPEAKING

Practical money skills. Real-life conversations.

Financial education for schools, universities, employers, community groups and entrepreneurs.

Elisha Sithole holds an MCom in Financial Economics and Investment and an Honours degree in Economics. He brings over five years of banking-sector experience, including development finance and work with public- and private-sector stakeholders.

Session ideas to discuss

Budgeting for real life

Map income, essential spending and a realistic next step.

Money at work

Explore household planning and practical financial habits.

Student money skills

Plan study costs, understand borrowing and prepare for a first salary.

Investing fundamentals

Understand uncertainty, time horizons and research questions.

Business finance basics

Separate personal money, consider pricing and forecast cash flow.

Making sense of money news

Connect inflation, exchange rates and everyday decisions.

Topics are customisable. Specific availability, scope, fees and delivery arrangements are confirmed after an enquiry. No accreditation or recognised certification is claimed.

PLAN A WORKSHOP

A session shaped around your audience.

1. Tell us about your group

Share the audience, approximate group size, topic, preferred date, location and whether you prefer online or in-person delivery.

2. Agree the learning goals

Discuss what participants should understand and practise. Possible formats include workshops, webinars, seminars, speaking engagements and panels.

3. Confirm the details

Duration, dates, materials, delivery and fees are agreed for the session. Request a quote; submitting an enquiry does not confirm a booking.

Practical outcomes to discuss

Participants might practise a basic budget, identify a financial goal, explain investment risk, distinguish profit from cash or create a simple cash-flow plan. Final outcomes depend on the agreed session.
